The Easier Way Is the

Co-operative Way

There is no royal road to busi-There is no royal road to business success—but some ways are easier than others.

Co-operative advertising between merchants and manufacturers in the newspapers that directly reach the buying public is the modern "Easier Way."

When the manufacturer of a nationally distributed article puts his plea for business in the newspapers of this town he is making customers for your store as well as for himself, Mr. Dealer.

as well as for himself, Mr. Dealer.

The more business he can send to the store the better off he is.

Conversely, every time the merchant treats a prospective customer pleasantly, shows the advertised article, and explains its merits, he is helping the manufacturer as well as himself.

It's a fair game of push and rull.

When manufacturer and mer chant work together through the columns of the local newspapers they are moving to success along the "Easier Way."

MINIMUM WAGE FAVORED ENDOWMENT POLICY AID BY CONSUMERS' LEAGUE Makes Up Her Mind Not to Die, Senate Resolution for Appropriation to Investigate Subject Indorsed.

H. La Rue Brown Explains Opera tion of Law in Massachusetts. Miss Leupp Speaks.

Advocacy of minimum wage legislation for the District marked the annual meeting of the Consumers' League of the Disnoon. A resolution was passed indorsing the resolution pending in the Senate for operation of a minimum wage law in his has to die to win.

Mr. Brown said that the entire public is vitally concerned in the minimum wage policy matures," he said. question, because if an employer pays his employes less than a living wage some one else makes up the difference between the salary she receives and the amount it actually costs her to live. This difference, said, is paid either by the people who support cheap homes for working girls and women or by the employers of other members of the girls' families. In this way, he said, the public helps support any industrial company which pays low wages.

Mr. Brown defined a living wage as including the cost of shelter, clothing, food, health, some things to make life pleasant, and something to save for a "rainy day." In Massachusetts, he said, the minimum wage varies according to the industry and conditions, but the average minimum wage for girls and average minimum wage for girls and laverage minimum wage for girls and laverage minimum wage for sirls and laverage minimum wage for girls and laverage minimum wage wages as well was a wage was a wa Lives Off of Community, He Says.

"Although I do not know Washington, have no doubt whatever that I can find many organizations here which do not pay that much to their employes," he continued. "The argument that the women and girls who get less are memwomen and girls who get less are members of families is a fallacy, because, as a general thing, one out of every three working women and girls is not living with her family or else is the head of a family. But if she gives her entire working time to her employer he should pay her enough to live on whether she lives with her family or not. Otherwise he is living off the community."

Mr. Brown said that in his opinion, gained from experience, the connection between low wages paid women and girls

"But the big thing about the Massachusetts minimum wage law is that it

"One necessary thing in such legislation is that there must be a way of protecting the man who is willing to pay decent wages against the man who is not willing to pay the same. Personally I think that if employes are paid better, and thus freed of worry, they will do so much better work for their employer that he can still compete with the man who pays low wages.

"An industry which cannot pay decent wages to its employes must be so bad that it is a burden on the community and should go out of business. If the public will not deal with that business sufficiently to allow it to pay living wages, it ought

Benefits of Eight-Hour Law.

Miss Constance D. Leupp, president of nediate results of the passage of the eight-hour law for women in the Diseight-hour law for women in the Dis-trict, which the league supported. As a result of it, she said, many women are now living a normal life, who formerly were little more than slaves. "We are not disturbed at the outery from some quarters against this law," she said. "We know that the agitation will not continue, and that all will soon accept it."

Answering the argument that some passed.

Miss Leupp said that since the passage of the law some women and girls have been displaced by men, but on the other hand, she added, many more women and girls have found work. She said that the enforcement of the law will be greatly assisted if the right kind of inspectors are obtained.

She told how the Housekeepers' Alliance is trying to find out if it will help the laundries if they get people's wash Friday or Saturday instead of Monday.

Need for Minimum Wage Law.

Concluding, Miss Leupp said that she elieved wages paid women and girls to be low in Washington, and that there was need for a minimum wage law here. A resolution was adopted indorsing the La Follette seamen's bill now pending in the House.

Miss Leupp was re-elected president of Miss Leupp was re-elected president of the league, and other officers were chosen as follows: Mrs. Harvey W. "I left him for good and sufficient reasons," she said, "but wish to make no charges against him. I suppose he is suing me because he wants to be free, and I can't see any reason why he shouldn't be. If by charging me with desertion he means only that I have left him, I can't deny the charge."

Reports of difficulties between Mr. and Mrs. Tully were circulated in 1912 and 1913.

New Japanese Ministry Not Likely to Be More Aggressive on California Land Question.

Although the opposition, which now omes into power in Japan with the downfall of the Yamomoto ministry. made capital out of the failure of Yomomoto's policy of dealing with the California land question, assurance is felt in Washington official circles that no more aggressive stand in the negotiations with the United States will follow the change of ministry.

The external relations of Japan, it is confidently held, will remain unaffected notwithstanding the resignation of the cabinet as a result of the parliamentary disagreement over the naval budget. The naval scandal has overshadowed the American dispute. Also custom will protect external relations against the vicissitudes of internal politics. Consequently it is anticipated by the officials here that there will be no substantial change in the tone of the negotiations. While there was a more or less urgent demand by the so-called jingoistic elements in Japan upon the government for the adoption of a more aggressive attitude toward the United States, that issue has been almost completely obscured by the uncovering of the naval scandals.

Answering the argument that some women are making less money as a result of the law, Miss Leupp told of a woman she knew who is paid by piece work. Following the passage of the law her salary dropped, Miss Leupp said, because she was working less hours. But soon her efficiency began to increase, and now she is making nearly as much as she did before the law was passed.

In a minstrel show all-day session, which lasted until 8:19 o'clock p.m., the fouse hurried through the major portion of the forty-three-million-dollar rivers and harbors appropriation bill yesterday. Representative Frear of Wiscon sin, who has been a snag in the way of rapid navigation throughout the entire bill, made trouble all day long for the members of the rivers and harbors committee, and Representative Callaway jumped on the bill from various heights and angles. In fact, he was so persistent a jumper that his colleague, "Jack" Beall of Texas, took him to task and explained that Callaway was opposed to all navigation ever since he had been seasick on a trip to and from Panama.
